STEUBEN'S PLACE IN HISTORY

THE date is uncertain, but it was probably about the middle of the seventeenth century, when the famed and dreaded Iroquois Confederacy, occupying most of what is now New York State, conquered the almost equally famous Delaware nation. Some historians say the Delawares were not conquered, but rather duped into signing a treaty which deprived them of the right of making war and reduced them to the status of women. In any event, the Delawares were thereafter forced to look to the Iroquois for protection from their enemies. This may explain why the Delawares never made war upon William Penn and his Quakers; they DARED not without the consent of the Iroquois. And this consent, for various reasons, was not forthcoming.

Shortly after the Delawares were forced, or duped, into making their treaty with the Iroquois, a number of them set out in canoes for the country of their conquerors. They intended to found a village where they would indeed be under the protection of the fierce warriors of the North. Up the Susquehanna this party forced their canoes, into the Chemung, and finally into the middle one of three streams whose confluence was at or near the place now called Painted Post. This stream was known as the Kanestio River, the name being variously translated as "Board on the water"; "Place of putting in of the canoes"; or merely, "Head of navigation."

The Delawares came at last to a place where the narrow valley widened into broad natural prairies, a fit place to pasture horses and cattle. Here they landed and proceeded to build their homes, at first doubtless merely wigwams. The Senecas—most westerly of the six tribes of the Iroquois—seem to have ignored these newcomers. Presently they forgot them. In the meantime news got abroad that Kanestio Castle, as it presently came to be called, was a city of refuge for the lawless. To this place came refugees from many of the tribes east of the Mississippi; escaped slaves; footpads and highwaymen from the coast col-

CONTENTS

CHAPTER I. THE STATE OF THE COUNTRY

The first chapter of the book is devoted to a general description of the country, its climate, soil, and productions. It also contains a list of the principal cities and towns, and a description of the principal rivers and lakes. The author has been very particular in his description of the country, and has given a great deal of information concerning its history, its government, and its people. This chapter is very interesting and useful, and is well worth reading.

The second chapter of the book is devoted to a description of the principal cities and towns of the country. The author has given a very detailed description of each city, and has also given a list of the principal streets and buildings. This chapter is very interesting and useful, and is well worth reading.

The third chapter of the book is devoted to a description of the principal rivers and lakes of the country. The author has given a very detailed description of each river and lake, and has also given a list of the principal islands and bays. This chapter is very interesting and useful, and is well worth reading.

onies; renegade Frenchmen from Canada; Yankees from Connecticut; Dutchmen from the Hudson Valley: all those whose misdeeds or love of adventure drove them from their former homes. And so time went on. . .

The Senecas, fiercest and most powerful tribe of the Iroquois Confederacy, had fought with many people, but they never contested with stranger folk than the outlaws of Kanestio Castle.

This forgotten battle took place in the valley of Canaseraga Creek, in the northwestern part of Steuben County, on the flats near the mouth of that darksome gorge now known as Stony Brook Glen. In this well-kept and popular state park crowds of happy people, unmindful of the locality's bloody history, now boil their coffee over the stone fireplaces, swim in the pool which has been made in the nearby creek, or wander for a mile up the wild and tree-studded canyon which is spanned by the Shawmut Railroad bridge.

The invaders from Kanestio, polyglot in character, as we have noted, finally yielded before the ferocious onslaughts of the "Keepers of the Western Door" and sought refuge in the glen. Here some of them were hunted out and slain; but the majority fled up the narrow gorge, whose rocky walls towered hundreds of feet on either side, hid in the pine coppices, or in clefts of the adjacent rocks, and under the cloak of darkness made their way back to Kanestio Castle. A day or two after the fight a half-breed Delaware girl was haled from a cave where she had been hiding while fearfully telling her beads—berries stripped from thorn bushes.

The Senecas by no means came unscathed from the fray. They lost one of their best chiefs. The body of this leader was taken back a few miles and buried on a spot now occupied by the Lutheran Church of Dansville.

The approximate date of this strange battle is fixed by the French, to whom we owe our first authentic knowledge of the Kanestio outlaws. It was in 1690 that Count Frontenac, Governor-General of Canada, learned that the territory of the Senecas was being raided by an uncouth people. In view of the fact that at the time—and indeed until after the French and Indian War—all New York from the Finger Lake region west, was claimed as a part of New France, he decided to investigate. He therefore dispatched an expedition composed of armor-clad soldiers, semi-nude Indians, and Jesuits in their clerical garb; all being under the command of Sieur De Villiers. The total number of the party is uncertain, but it was sufficient.

The miniature army left what is now Kingston, Ontario, Canada, crossed Lake Ontario and skirted the southern shore until the mouth of the Genesee River was reached. In canoes they ascended that stream for a distance estimated as sixty miles (too generous a calculation, by the way). At what is now known as Mount Morris they turned into Canaseraga Creek. After following this stream to a point probably beyond Dansville, they struck into an Indian trail which led over a high ridge and then along marshy ground for perhaps nine miles. Apparently they carried their canoes with them. At a spot now marked by the village of Arkport, they launched their craft in a small river which flowed in a southeasterly direction. They proceeded for about ten miles down a wide valley which for the most part was heavily wooded. They then saw and smelled the smoke of pine knots. They heard loud and discordant shouts, the barking of a legion of dogs. Passing the mouth of a small creek, they found a group of "several score of houses built of timber, each having four stone chimneys, adjoining a natural meadow of several hundred arpents." Kanestio Castle!

From the houses poured a motley collection of persons. Concerning them the historian of the expedition said: "A more worthless lot of renegades and villains, who had no hope of heaven or fear of hell, we never saw."

Thus did the outlaws of Kanestio Castle, the flotsam of civilization and the wilderness alike, first emerge into history. Awed by the impressive display of force which the invaders were able to muster, the "villains" and their slatternly female consorts looked silently upon the scene while De Villiers erected a cross, flung to the breeze the white banner of France with its golden fleur de lis, proclaimed that the region belonged to Louis XIV, celebrated the mass, then resumed his journey, proceeding in a southwesterly direction, possibly along what is now Purdy Creek Valley, and so on to the headwaters of the Genesee.

For seventy-two years thereafter the settlement which the French had called Ken-is-tio failed to appear in the chronicles of the period. Yet the character of its population did not change, at least for the better. Its location was known to the lawless of the coastal regions, and it continued to be a city of refuge to the rejected of men. Constantly was the population replenished by wanderers from afar. Even some deserters from the British army came. These latter individuals superintended the construction of two forts which guarded the valley from the east. Remains of these fortifications were in evidence when the first white settlers came, a few years after the Revolution. Indeed, the north-eastern mud wall of one of them is yet faintly discernible.

The outlaws must have initiated a municipal government of a sort, for it appears they had a chosen leader or chief. James Oliver Curwood, in his historical romance, The Plains of Abraham, states that the hero of the tale "came to Kanestio, whose chief was Matozee, or Yellow Bear." Possibly. The period in the "Castle's" history covered by Curwood was 1756. Eight years later the leader of the outlaws was Chief Atweetsera.

It may have been because of the forts that the village was called a castle. However, it was a common practice thus to designate permanent settlements of the Iroquois, as distinguished from mere temporary camps. To the influence of the white men who lived there we can attribute the forts, the well-built cabins with four fireplaces in each, the orchard of fruit trees which still remained when the legitimate settlers came.

In the year 1762 Kanestio again forged into public notice. Two Dutch traders from the Hudson, British subjects, came along one day and were promptly murdered by a brace of outlaws from the Castle who apparently had stumbled upon them in the woods. News of this outrage leaked out, and Sir William Johnson, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, requested the Senecas to apprehend and deliver up to justice the ones concerned. The Iroquois chiefs were evasive. One of the murderers had fled to the Ohio, they claimed. And just why, they asked, should the people of the Long House be held responsible for the actions of the inhabitants of such a village as Kanestio, which was populated by "stragglers from all nations"?

Sir William scorned to dilly-dally. He selected a noted leader of borderers, Captain Andrew Montour, placed him in command of 140 Indians and Colonial soldiers and ordered him to proceed to Kanestio and blot out that sink of iniquity. At least one reputable historian claims that Joseph Brant, later known to Revolutionary history as Chief Thayendanega, was a member of the party. This may easily have been so. In the spring of 1764, when Montour started his drive, Brant was but twenty-two years of age. . .

April, 1764. It had been a hard winter in the Kanestio Valley. The outlaws' cattle had come through in poor condition, for fodder had been scarce. But now the snow had melted. The grass which covered rankly the natural prairie bordering the village was turning green. All the streams which poured out of the three valleys to the south and the four to the north roared with roily water. The Kanestio River was bank full.

A raw misty dawn. A sudden crackle of rifle shots. Yells, screams, stampeding cattle. Montour and his vengeful borderers had come.

Ensued pandemonium. Wild, hairy men—red, black, white and brown—sprang from the cabins, yelled at their mates, glared for a moment at Montour's charging force, then incontinently fled toward the Genesee Valley. Chief Atweetsera, headed off, raced down along the river's bank, swam the stream and hid in a cave which, tradition says, was located in what is now known as Obe's Glen. For the time he escaped, but eventually was taken by the Senecas and turned over to Sir William Johnson.

The torch was applied to the sixty houses which at this time composed Kanestio, and soon a billowing mass of smoke rolled over the damp prairie and choked the narrow valley below, where one of the unguarded forts had been passed unnoticed by Montour's men. It was a mighty conflagration and the darting flames licked clean. Kanestio Castle ceased to be. Its ashes eventually merged with the rank soil of the river bottom land, the orchard became overgrown with brush, the mud walls of the forts vanished under the influence of erosion. Gradually the memory of the unholy place that had been faded from men's minds, and only hunting parties of Senecas sometimes came that way. Twenty-four years passed before a pioneering group of white men blundered upon the hidden valley with its extraordinary prairie, where the renegades' settlement had flourished for several generations.

The history of Kanestio Castle constitutes the genesis of Steuben County.

And now a word about Andrew Montour. He was one of the sons of the so-called Queen Catherine Montour. Supposed to have been a natural daughter of Count Frontenac, Governor of Canada, she had been stolen by Indians when young. Through sheer force of character she in due time became the virtual ruler of the sub-tribe of Senecas who dwelt near the head of Seneca Lake, on a spot now marked by Montour Falls.

Her son, Andrew Montour, although a half-breed, became noted as a leader of Indians and colonial soldiery. Zinzendorf, the Moravian missionary, left what is probably the only description of Montour extant. This was quoted by Parkman in his book, Montcalm and Wolfe, and reads:

“His face is like that of an European, but marked with a broad ring of bear’s grease and paint drawn completely round it. He wears a coat of fine cloth of cinnamon color, a black necktie with silver spangles, a red satin waistcoat, trousers over which hangs his shirt, shoes and stockings, a hat, and brass ornaments, something like the handle of a basket, suspended from his ears.”

When the Revolution came Montour adhered to the cause of the king. In an obscure frontier skirmish during the summer of 1779, he was mortally wounded. His savage followers, with whom he was extremely popular, carried him to the confluence of the Kanestio and Conhocton Rivers, and there he died. They buried him under the elms and marked his grave with a large post which they painted with symbolical designs commemorative of his exploits. This gave rise to the designation of the locality—the Painted Post Country—and furnished the name to the modern village located on that site.

In the early days, the tiny settlement of Painted Post was the gateway to the region that presently became Steuben County. Through it passed the twelve proprietors of the two-township tract which embraced the site of the former Kanestio. Through it passed Charles Williamson and his brawny Scots, to found the future capital of the county, foster horse racing and fairs, entertain guests from Virginia and even Europe, and to become embroiled in the Aaron Burr conspiracy. Through Painted Post passed Christopher Hurlbut, who stopped not at the new settlement of Canisteo, but went on to the upper reaches of the river, and there, in 1800, built an ark of pine lumber, loaded it with wheat and dispatched it to Baltimore. He thereby furnished a name to his settlement—Arkport—and started the use of the river as an artery of commerce, which was to reach its maximum usefulness several decades later, in the age of rafting.

But as yet there was no Steuben County; it was merely a part of that vast region called Ontario County. The first supervisor of what was later the town of Canisteo, but then the town variously called Erwin, Painted Post, or Williamson, had to go on foot to Canandaigua to meet with the Board of Supervisors. But in March, 1796, a new county was formed from Ontario and called Steuben. Why Steuben? To commemorate the exploits of the Master Builder of the American Army; a man to whom America never fully paid her debt.

Baron Frederick William von Steuben was born at Madgeburg, Prussia, November 15, 1730, the son of a captain of engineers in the Prussian service. After years of duty as a junior officer, Steuben was appointed adjutant general under Frederick the Great. His record as a soldier attracted the attention of the king who made Steuben one of a select inner circle of officers to whom the great military genius personally imparted instruction in the most abstruse branches of the art of war. It was fortunate that Steuben decided to come to America and offer his talent. The Revolutionary patriots needed instruction in tactics and discipline to render them effective. The Baron arrived during the terrible winter at Valley Forge. Appointed by Congress Inspector General of the Continental army, he drilled the ragged and starving troops until, the following summer, they were enabled to defeat the British army in the open field at Monmouth. Thereafter, says Lossing, the American regulars were never vanquished in fair fight by an equal number of the enemy.

The Baron wrote Drill Regulations for the use of the army which were made official when John Jay, then President of Congress, issued an order to that effect on March 29, 1779.

Miss Louise Lair, the present librarian in charge of the Davenport Memorial Library at Bath, has in her personal possession a copy of the twelfth edition of this drill manual. It is a leather-covered book, 6½ by 4 inches, the full title being: "Regulations for the order and discipline of the Troops of the United States. By Baron de Steuben, late Major Gen. & Inspector Gen. of the American Army. The Twelfth Edition. To which is added the Manual Exercise & Evolutions of the Cavalry, as practiced in the late American Army. Printed in Vermont, by Anthony Haswell, in the year 1794."

Included are charts showing the various positions of the soldier, together with diagrams for the formation of regiments, the order of march, making camp, etc. The wording of the text is quaint but clear. A single quotation will suffice: "The Position of a Soldier Without Arms. He is to stand strait and firm upon his legs, with his head turned to the right so far as to bring the left eye over the waistcoat buttons; the heels two inches apart; the toes turned out; the belly drawn in a little, but without constraint; the breast a little projected; the shoulders square to the front and kept back; and the hands hanging down the sides, with the palms close to the thighs."

This drill manual was used by the regular army and the militia until the war of 1812.

A letter was recently found in Washington which indicates that Steuben had a notion of leaving America after the war. Penned by General Horatio Gates, December 6, 1785, and addressed to the Baron, it reads, in part, as follows: "I am interested at your determination to leave this country. The soldiers part with their Military Father when you go away from them. They never knew a regular system of discipline until you came and taught them. . ."

Steuben did not leave the country. Seven years after the conclusion of peace, Congress voted him a pension of $2,500 a year, while New York State gave him a tract of uncleared land near Utica, in what has since been called the town of Steuben. Here he died on November 28, 1794; and when our county was organized, less than 18 months later, it was named Steuben in his honor. It has become his greatest monument.

When organized, Steuben had but six towns: Bath, Canisteo, Dansville, Frederickstown, Middletown and Painted Post. It is not my purpose to explain just how and when these six original towns were subdivided into the thirty-two towns of the present. That has been done in sufficient detail by the various county historians.

Incidentally, Steuben has been one of the best advertised counties in the state. First came Guy H. McMaster, with his History of the Settlement of Steuben County, N.Y., published by R. S. Underhill & Co., Bath, 1853. This book was small and sketchy, but proved immensely popular. The first edition is now rare, but there have been reprints. Next came Prof. W. W. Clayton with his History of Steuben County, a huge affair of 460 pages, representing a prodigious amount of labor, published by Lewis, Peck & Co., Philadelphia, 1879. A magnificent work. In 1891, Millard F. Roberts published at Syracuse his Historical Gazetteer of Steuben County, New York, a poorly-bound book of 354 pages, containing some good material not found in the others. However, the author proved himself too credulous in accepting stories with little foundation. Landmarks of Steuben County appeared in 1896, published by D. Mason & Company, of Syracuse. This purported to be edited by Hon. Harlo Hakes, assisted by L. C. Aldrich and others. Although containing 530 pages of good paper, and well bound, it had little new material and was, in fact, but a rehash of other works. Irvin W. Near, of Hornell, produced his History of Steuben County, New York, and Its People, in two volumes, in 1911. It was printed by The Lewis Publishing Company of Chicago, and contained nearly a thousand pages. It was the first history of the county to make any mention of the French expedition to Kanestio in 1690. It also contained a large number of biographies, disfigured, it must be said, by the highfalutin diction once popular but now as obsolete as the hoop skirt. On the whole it was a worth-while effort and represented honest hard work by the author. Finally, 1932 witnessed the production, by the Historical Publishing Company of Indianapolis, of Harry R. Melone's History of Central New York—in three volumes. This covered eleven counties, of which Steuben was the farthest west. It was well written, bound in cloth, and presented some new material; but the price ($28.50) prevented a large distribution. Steuben County was allotted considerable space. . . In 1873, D. G. Beers & Company, Philadelphia, produced an Atlas of Steuben County, showing in detail the towns and villages, together with school districts, and even the country roads which had actually been measured by men trundling queer contraptions similar to wheelbarrows. Even yet, this work, with its numerous colored maps, is valuable. . . There have been works of local interest, such as Clarence Willis' pamphlets on the history of the Pulteney Estate; Stacy Jackson's History of Cameron (published serially in The Canisteo Chronicle); Erwin's History of Painted Post; Uri Mulford's History of Corning; William M. Stuart's Stories of the Kanestio Valley. In addition to these, the introductory chapter of the excellent work, Town Government, by James S. Drake, Jr., County Attorney of Steuben, contains a large amount of historical detail, well presented.

Altogether, as before remarked, Steuben County has had considerable publicity. So I shall put into this introductory chapter of mine just what I wish. For the most part it will be material ignored by the average county historian.

[The text on this page is extremely faint and illegible. It appears to be a single column of text, possibly a list or a series of entries, but the characters are too light to be transcribed accurately.]

Let us, if you please, look somewhat into the lives of the ancestors of our present Who's Who in Steuben, and note what they did, what their amusements were, ponder on their passions, prejudices and hopes.

When the county was formed, and for a considerable time thereafter, there seems to have been no financial depression. Few persons were out of work; labor of all kind was in demand. Carpenters obtained a dollar a day and their board, or a dollar and twenty-five cents if they boarded themselves. One could live well on small earnings. Twenty-five cents purchased a meat dinner at a tavern, while at a farm house it was fifteen cents. A nice fat hen could be had for a York shilling (12½ cents). Beef was four cents a pound; flour five dollars a barrel—but generally the farmers raised their own; they drew their wheat to the nearest mill and had it ground into flour. Wild meat—bear, deer, rabbits, squirrels—could be secured within thirty minutes after leaving the house. The settlers were great trenchermen. It was not unusual for a hearty man to eat a dozen eggs for breakfast on Paas morning (Easter).

Dr. Elijah Parish, who wrote in 1812, says the social strata of the time were as follows:

“Merchants, lawyers, physicians, and clergymen form the first class; farmers and artisans, the second; workmen, who let themselves by the day or month, the third. In public amusements these classes do not (commonly) intermix.”

With all respect to the learned doctor, I believe he was in error. The social lines—in what yet was really the backwoods—were so faintly drawn as scarcely to be observed. A hired man might be, and frequently was, the social equal of his employer. Clergymen, it is true, then, as for generations previously, and for many years to come, stood on a solitary pinnacle, but the rest of the people blended imperceptibly. There were few wealthy families, although each community had its outstanding men noted for sagacity, energy and sheer ability.

The harvesting and threshing season was one of hard and painstaking work. As in the days of Boaz and Ruth, the reaping was done by means of the sickle, a single curved steel blade with a handle. The cradle, which represented a great advance in husbandry, was slow in coming. This implement was a frame of wood with long curved teeth fastened to a scythe. Crude as it was, it permitted the laborer to reap four times what his former best effort had compassed. But even cradling was back-breaking work, and the employer was expected to furnish liberal quantities of ale, beer or whiskey for the laborers.

There were no threshing machines. To winnow the grain the farmer, like Oran the Jebusite of old, prepared a threshing floor—frequently merely a spot where the earth had been packed hard, like a cellar bottom—near his barn. On this spot the wheat-, oat-, or buckwheat straw was first spread, not too thickly, then laboriously attacked with flails. At other times horses or oxen were driven round and round the floor until it seemed that most of the kernels had been trodden out. Then the straw was pitched about and shaken in the wind, turned over and trodden yet more. Overcautious husbandmen sometimes wasted effort on this process; from which comes, we suppose, that figure of speech denoting useless and futile endeavor: “Threshing old straw.” When using horses or oxen to tread out the grain the animals were never muzzled, in strict conformity with the Biblical injunction: “Muzzle not the ox that treadeth out the corn.”

After the kernels had been separated from the straw the grain had yet to be cleaned from chaff and dirt. Before the day of the portable fanning mill this was accomplished by tossing the grain in the air during a stiff gale, or by pouring it slowly from one receptacle into another, allowing the wind to drive out the foreign matter.

The winter of 1815-16 was terribly severe. The settlers had difficulty in keeping the stock fed and watered, for the drifts were so deep that frequently the animals became imprisoned in the snow and had to be shoveled out. The worst of the matter was that spring seemed long in coming. Fodder got low, but by the middle of April there was no relief; the snow lay on the ground six feet deep. In May the ground still could not be reached. June came and the snow vanished, but the soil was frozen in many places. During the last of June came another snow storm which furnished sleighing for several days. The morning of July 4th was bitterly cold. In some localities water froze in the wells and even in pitchers on the kitchen table. Snow squalls occurred in some places, and the patriotic observances of the day were held in halls warmed by blazing fires.

As the season that should have been summer progressed, the farmers made desperate efforts to raise their crops. No use!

They would not grow. The people knew not what to think of the matter. But they managed to survive, and the summer of 1817—average in all respects—arrived in due time.

The settlers took their religion seriously. Church trials were frequent. The writer has in his possession the Minutes of the Session of the First Presbyterian Church of Woodhull, organized at Hedgesville in 1831. Carefully set down in the Minutes is the report of the trial of a brother who, by his own brazen confession, had been guilty of entering Bogg's Tavern on a training day for the rifle company, and had there sung in Quick Time Bonaparte's March. Furthermore, he had taken enough liquor to feel it and had later requested another church brother to perform an act not done in polite society.

The erring church member was properly disciplined.

The Training Day should, perhaps, be explained. Baron Steuben is credited with this idea, having incorporated it in a Militia Act which he recommended to Washington shortly after the Revolution. So it came to pass that once a year, upon a stipulated day, all able-bodied men in the community (every community) who were subject to militia duty, were forced to repair to a central place for military training.

The line and general officers were appointed by the Governor, and frequently these were men who had had previous military training. They usually were persons of substance and standing in the neighborhood and provided themselves with uniforms.

Not so the men. There seems to have been no provision for equipment; or, if so, it was inadequate. It resulted that each alleged soldier had to furnish his own gun, canteen, blanket and other necessary articles. There was a great diversity in equipment. Some had muskets, in rare instances even bayonets. But others brought a squirrel rifle, a shot gun, or in lieu of this a pistol. Even pitchforks and pikes were made to serve. As a military force it was a joke. A single regiment of regulars would have been able to put to flight a whole division of these embattled yeomen.

But the "Gin'ral Trainin' Day," as it was called, was popular as an annual social event. After a few hours of attempted maneuvers, including a queer parody of the manual of arms, the crowd dispersed to nearby taverns. Here the officers got drunk together, and the men, not to be outdone, also got drunk together. After accomplishing this blissful condition they fought, ran races, pitched quoits, sang, howled, drank some more, boasted about everything from the fighting qualities of the American militiaman to the pulling power of their new team, the good looks of their girl, their own personal strength and agility, or—strange as it may seem—the saving power of their particular brand of religion.

Finally they went home, or were taken home, bearing the firm conviction that the country was safe.

The people of Steuben never witnessed an execution until April 19, 1825, when Robert A. Douglas, the noted outlaw and murderer was hanged on Gallows Hill, just outside the Village of Bath. All of the people of the county who could get there came to see the killing. Throughout the vast crowd vendors sold gingerbread and cider. Folks laughed, jostled, talked continuously in strained voices, and strove to draw as near the grisly scaffold as possible.

Then a man dressed all in black, with a mask over his face, came riding a black stallion hard along the road from Bath. As he passed the scaffold he leaned over and pulled a rope. The drop fell and the youthful murderer was snatched into eternity. The black rider kept on his way and no man in all that crowd, save possibly two or three, could say who he was. Before the mob had dispersed a tempest rose in the west and raged with violence. Certain timid souls believed this was a sign from Heaven that the execution was wrong.

An event long remembered was the shower of meteors, which took place on the night of November 12-13, 1833. It has been estimated that on this night, during a space of nine hours, 240,000 meteors fell, varying in size from a mere point of light or a phosphorescent line, to globes apparently of the moon's diameter.

I once knew an old lady who witnessed that spectacle and who enjoyed telling about it. Although she died in Steuben County, aged 91, at the time—a girl of sixteen—she was residing with an uncle, Charles Roberts, of Milo, Yates County. However, what she saw must have been seen also by many of the residents of this county. Her story:

“It was a cold night, the roads were frozen hard, although there was no snow. Cousin Clarissa and I had gone to our room quite early. I think I had slept for a while when I heard a horseman passing the house. Suddenly this man cried out, and his voice was scared and hoarse. Uncle Charles and Cousin Charles had not yet retired. They ran out into the front yard and we heard them talking to the man. We knew that something unusual had happened. I sprang out of bed and ran to a window. Then I almost screamed with fright; at first I thought the end of the world had come, for the stars were falling from the sky! The night, which had been clear when I went to bed, was now lit by an unearthly light and the stars, it seemed, were falling as fast as snowflakes.

"Clarissa and I dressed, went down stairs, put on some wraps and joined the rest of the family in the yard. Then we all walked down the road to the top of the hill overlooking Milo. The street was full of people, some of whom were shouting, others praying. Far off a dog howled mournfully. Uncle Charles told us not to be frightened. He said he had read of a similar shower of meteors, away back in 1799. This was merely another like that one had been.

"But I was so scared my teeth clicked together. The sky all above Seneca County, on the farther side of the lake, was thick with streams of rolling fire. Balls of fire as small as an acorn, or as big as a basin, streaked in all directions. One of them that looked like the moon fell almost straight down and disappeared from sight behind the grocery store, down where the road turned off. Others seemed to fall into the lake, and I could hear an odd hissing noise. It was dreadful and awe-inspiring.

"Children cried and dogs barked, but soon the older persons grew quiet; just watched and pointed. It was so light we could see all over the countryside. The lake gleamed like gold. While the meteors seemed brighter in some places, the whole sky was filled with them. It appeared as though they were spouting from a huge funnel.

"If I had not been so scared I should have enjoyed it. I never expect to see anything like it again. Down in Milo some of the people went back into their houses. Later we heard that they believed the end of the world was at hand, so they went in to make their peace with God.

"Hour after hour the meteors continued to fall. We girls grew tired at last, returned to the house and went back to bed, but the men folks stayed out all night. They told us the next morning that the strange shower continued all the rest of the night, or for the space of nine hours. . ."

Seven years previous to this event, and for a number of years thereafter, Steuben County, together with most of the counties of all the Northern States, was swept by a peculiar wave of bigotry and hatred such as had never before been known in our history. The reason was this:

William Morgan, a Virginian by birth, a bricklayer and stone mason by trade, removed to York, Canada, in 1821, failed in business, came to Rochester, N. Y., and finally, in the summer of 1823, to Batavia. Professing to be a member of the Masonic fraternity, he was welcomed and even was permitted to join a Chapter of the Royal Arch at LeRoy. But when a petition was started for a new chapter at Batavia, his name was omitted; for in the meantime his true character had become known. He was no less than a shiftless, drunken sot. The Masonic fraternity had contributed to the support of his family, but now it would have nothing more to do with him.

Morgan decided to gratify his spirit of revenge, and at the same time make some money, by publishing an expose of Freemasonry. He enlisted the support of David C. Miller, the editor of a small newspaper at Batavia and a man who had been stopped after taking the first degree in Masonry. The news of Morgan's and Miller's purpose leaked out and caused indignation among the local Masons. An attempt was made to burn Miller's office. A portion of Morgan's manuscript was stolen. Morgan was several times arrested for debt and placed in jail at Canandaigua. From the final incarceration he was released on the night of September 12, 1826, by several men who paid his debt. The party hurried Morgan from the jail and one of them gave a distinct rap on the curb of a well, whereupon a two-horse carriage was driven up by a man named Hiram Hubbard. Morgan was thrust into the carriage, his cries being stifled by a gag, and Loton Lawson, Burrage Smith, John Whitney, James Gillis, and probably other persons then unknown, either entered the carriage or mounted horses.

It was about nine o'clock and the sleepy villagers of Canandaigua were in bed. It was a bright, moonlight night. The two-horse conveyance, accompanied by outriders, rapidly left the town and headed for the open country. No one interfered with or molested them. The party stopped for an hour at a tavern in Victor, then drove on, arriving between four and five o'clock at a livery stable in Rochester. Here a change of rigs was made and then the journey was resumed, westerly along the ridge road. Breakfast was had in a woods not many miles out of Rochester. Joined at different places by various men, presumably all Royal Arch Masons, including Eli Bruce, Sheriff of Niagara County, the party came at last to Youngstown and stopped at the home of Colonel William King. The latter joined the others and they went on to the burying ground of Fort Niagara. Here the carriage was discharged and the party, including the captive, walked to the old French fort, then ungarisoned and under the supervision of a caretaker. William Morgan was locked in the magazine of the fort. This was sometime before dawn on the morning of the fourteenth. The prisoner was left in charge of one Edward Giddins, who later recanted and established the Anti-Masonic Almanac.

Morgan's abductors crossed the Niagara River and had a conference with Canadian Masons who were urged to accept the custody of Morgan. It would appear that this originally was part of the plan, but the Canadians would not now fulfill their portion of the agreement. The American party returned to the fort and later, it is charged, they endeavored to induce an attorney by the name of Brant—a son of the famous Joseph Brant, or Chief Thayendanegea of Revolutionary record—to come with a party of Indians and make way with Morgan. Brant refused.

On the day that Morgan was placed in Fort Niagara, a Royal Arch Chapter was installed at Lewiston, seven miles distant. Giddins, finding that his captive was noisy, sent for help and several of the Masons at the Lewiston meeting, including Loton Lawson, of whom Morgan had a great fear, came down and entered the magazine.

Right there all authentic record of Morgan ceases. Whether, as suggested by one eminent authority, Morgan was accidentally strangled by a gag too energetically used, whether he was bribed to go into Canada—as was claimed by his abductors—or whether he was foully murdered by being cast weighted into the Niagara River, as was at the time charged and has since been quite generally believed, will never be known. One thing is certain; Morgan was never heard of from that hour.

The Masonic fraternity disavowed the act, and De Witt Clinton, then Governor of the state and a prominent Mason, offered a reward for the arrest and conviction of Morgan's abductors or murderers. The abductors were arrested—as many as could be identified—and punished. Sheriff Bruce was removed from office; but no one ever was convicted of Morgan's murder, since the corpus delicti was wanting.

Although absolutely innocent, Masons everywhere were punished by the contempt and aversion of their neighbors. They were ostracized and actually persecuted, they and their families. In some localities they were denied church and school privileges. Masonry was all but annihilated. In Steuben County every lodge but two were closed; Morning Star at Canisteo, and Evening Star at Hornell. The Anti-Masonic political party sprang into being, threatened to sweep the country, and actually lasted for a number of years. But, in the end, the reputation for probity in their own community enjoyed by most Masons won the day for them. The excitement died out and was gone.

The coming of the canal era had its effect on Steuben. The Genesee Valley canal reached Dansville, just beyond the borders of Steuben, and rendered cheap and pleasant a journey to Rochester. The Chemung Canal, begun in 1830, had a spur extending from Horseheads to Corning. But the Crooked Lake Canal, from Penn Yan to Dresden, completed in 1833, had the greatest influence upon the people of Steuben. Hammondsport, situated at the head of Crooked (now Keuka) Lake, profited most. Boats loaded at that point now made their way down the lake to Penn Yan, thence through the new canal to Seneca Lake, down that temperamental body of water to Geneva, next traversed the Seneca and Cayuga Canal to the Erie Canal, and ultimately unloaded their cargoes at New York. Hammondsport thus became the port of shipping for an immense region. Farmers from all over Steuben and Allegany Counties drew their produce to Hammondsport, which little village, hitherto slumbering peacefully on the lake shore, began to grow with wondrous speed. Financiers, believing that it would surely become a metropolis, purchased all available land in the vicinity. During the early eighteen-thirties Hammondsport was a rival of Chicago.

It always has bulked large in the history of the county and the nation. It was there that the wine industry had its inception in the United States. Oddly, it was a clergyman who brought this thing about. Rev. William Bostwick, once rector of St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Bath, who also organized St. James' Church in Hammondsport, obtained some cuttings of Catawba and Isabella vines in the Hudson Valley, brought them to Hammondsport and set them in the grounds of the rectory. From this tiny beginning in 1829, sprang the grape industry which has clothed the hills about Hammondsport with precious fruit. Wine eventually followed as a matter of course. In 1850, William Hastings shipped some grapes to New York and sold them readily for a good price. Six years later J. W. Prentiss of Pulteney shipped two tons of grapes to New York. In 1860, Charles D. Champlin and others organized the Pleasant Valley Wine Company, building a plant at Rheims. Five years later the Urbana Wine Company was formed. Others followed; the acreage of vineyards increased rapidly. Within a few years the wineries of the Keuka region were producing seventy-five per cent of all the champagne made in America.

Hammondsport was yet to make another bid for fame and contribute mightily to the obtaining for Steuben her place in history. It became the Cradle of Aviation in America—hence the world. It was there, on July 4, 1908, that Glenn H. Curtiss, of lamented memory, announced that he would make a public airplane flight—the first in this broad land of ours.¹ He did just that thing, put Pleasant Valley, where he conducted his experimental work, on the map for all time, became a millionaire, drank deeply of the ambrosia of success, then died while yet a young man. Hammondsport, the scene of his early labors, shall always be known as the Cradle of Aviation in America.

The coming of the railroads spelled the doom of the canals, with all their romance of the tow path, roaring taverns, brawling canalers. But the railroads “made” Steuben. The Erie Railroad, which had long been in the minds of daring men, was extended to Elmira in 1849, came to Corning the next year, and in September, 1850, a pigmy locomotive known as the “Orange No. 4” drew the first train into Hornellsville, at that time a miserable little village of 100 houses, 2 churches, 2 schools. The place now began to grow. The first Erie shop, built in 1849, burned seven years later. But a new one was constructed, and on September 4, 1856, it was dedicated by a grand ball. There came an inrush of people, fortunes were made, the arts and sciences flourished, and Hornellsville added another stone to ¹On December 17, 1903, the Wright Brothers had made a flight lasting 12 seconds, rising 2 feet from the ground. It was witnessed only by Coast Guardsmen from the Kill Devil Life-Saving Station. Curtiss' performance was observed by hundreds of persons. He flew a machine called the June Bug for a mile and won the first leg of the Scientific American Trophy. It was the first pre-announced public flight in America.

Steuben's monument by establishing, in 1868, the first village library in all Western New York. The place had a newspaper even before it was incorporated as a village. The Hornellsville Tribune first fluttered its printed pages on Nov. 19, 1851. It is now owned by the third generation of the family that took it over in 1870. In June 1852, Hornellsville became a village. In 1888 it made its bow as a city. Now. . . But why boast?

Although the railroad "made" Hornell, and the county as well—not everything was honey and roses at first, or for a number of years thereafter. A writer in Harper's Bazaar, issue of July 30, 1870, thus criticizes the depot restaurant at Hornellsville:

"Eight o'clock, precisely to the minute, as laid down in the timetable, brought us to Hornellsville, where thirty minutes were allowed for breakfast. I suppose one must somewhere find occasion for complaint, and, as I have no other place for a bit of grumbling, Hornellsville must have its due. I have at one time or another come across some bad railway stopping places, but for badness, as far as my own experience goes, Hornellsville bears off the palm. . ."

The writer intimates that the steak was tough, the food poorly cooked, the coffee weak.

The fairs constituted an important item in the development of the community life of the people of Steuben. The County Fair at Bath is the oldest, as it is now the only one. During the regime of Colonel Charles Williamson fairs and races were held at Bath, but were abandoned when the Colonel went away. On June 10, 1819, the first Steuben Agricultural Society was organized at the court house in Bath, and four years later Colonel John Whiting was secretary. This society offered prizes for stock and produce, and certainly as early as 1841 a fair was held on the river flats. Various reorganizations of the original society were had, the one in May, 1853, resulting in the holding of the first annual county fair as we now know it. From that day until this, the Bath Fair has been an annual event that has attracted people from all over the county—and fakirs from the end of the land.

The logical ancestor of the "Great Hornell Fair" was the Canisteo Valley Fair, held in Union Square, Village of Hornellsville, in 1860. It lasted two days and was held under a tent. For ten years thereafter the fair had a spasmodic existence. Then came the Hornellsville Farmer's Club, devoted largely to horse racing.

The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been admitted to the membership of the Society since the last meeting. The names are arranged in alphabetical order of their surnames. The names of the persons who have been admitted to the membership of the Society since the last meeting are as follows: [The text is extremely faint and illegible, but appears to be a list of names.]

The Hornellsville Fair, later called "The Great Hornell Fair," was organized in May, 1903, with Attorney Clyde E. Shults as first—and, as it turned out, the only—secretary. He conducted this fair with the applause of teeming thousands for 27 years; but in 1929, possibly scenting afar the coming of the Great Depression, brought its activities to a close, and it is now only a memory.

Little Troupsburg, too, had a fair for a number of years, but that has passed, and now only the County Fair at Bath carries on.

Steuben's military record has justly added to her fame. For obvious reasons it had no Revolutionary history. The War of 1812 found Steuben's population still rather scanty. Yet men from this county did their full part in the struggle. Three companies of militia were called for 3 months service along the Niagara frontier in 1812. One of these companies—fifty men commanded by Captain James Sanford—was from Wayne Township; the second being from Urbana. The third company was made up of drafted men. The draft of 1812 was very simple; it was effected by taking every eighth man of the Steuben County regiment of organized militia. These three companies participated in the battle of Queenstown Heights. In the second year of the war two companies were drafted from the militia and sent to the front for four months. Besides these the county furnished some recruits to the regular army.

During the Mexican War Steuben County furnished Company I, for the 7th Regiment, N.Y. Volunteers. It was recruited at Bath by William E. Shannon, was sent to Governor's Island where it joined the regiment, and then was dispatched by transport around Cape Horn to California, consuming six months on the passage. It saw little or no fighting and was mustered out on Sept. 25, 1848, after nearly 26 months service.

It was during the Civil War that Steuben really showed her metal. During that herculean struggle this county actually furnished, wholly or in part, 5 regiments of cavalry, 5 regiments and 3 extra batteries of artillery, 1 regiment of engineers, and 15 regiments of infantry. Some of these organizations had only a company or so of Steuben County men; but the 86th N.Y. Volunteer Infantry, often called "The Steuben Rangers," was recruited largely in this county. It proved to be one of the most distinguished regiments that ever followed the flag.

Organized at Elmira in the fall of 1861, this outfit participated in 18 heavy engagements, including Gettysburg, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania and Petersburg, suffered a loss of 611 in killed and wounded out of a total enrollment of 1318 (besides 131 who died of disease, in prison, etc.) and fairly earned its reputation as "The Fighting Regiment of the Southern Tier."

At the outbreak of the Spanish War, the 47th Separate Company, N.G.N.Y., of Hornellsville, volunteered in a body (that was before the days of the Federalized National Guard), and was assigned to the 3d Regiment, N.Y. Volunteer Infantry as Company K. This same outfit was out again during the Mexican Border troubles of 1916-17, and during the World War, as Co. K, 108th Infantry, 27th Division, it suffered great loss and won undying fame at the breaking of the Hindenburg Line. Steuben gave 80 lives to the cause, of whom 32 were killed in action.

Steuben is noted for many things: It is the second potato county in the nation, being excelled only by Aroostook County, Maine. It has what are said to be the greatest buckwheat mills in the world. This concern, the Larrowe Buckwheat Flour Corporation, with its plant at Cohocton, was originated by Albertus Larrowe in 1870. The mill has a capacity of 1,200 barrels of buckwheat flour per 24 hour day. . .

With a population of approximately 83,000, Steuben has more than 5,000 farms, 2 cities, 15 incorporated villages, 3,134 miles of roads, of which rather more than 350 miles are state highway. Approximately 25,000 automobiles are owned in the county. There are two trunk lines of railroad, five excellent hospitals, a National Soldiers' Home (the corner stone of which, as a state institution, was laid June 13, 1877); twenty high schools; two daily newspapers, and at least one weekly paper in each of the larger villages. The Hornell Evening Tribune (daily) has already been referred to. The Corning Leader, too, has an interesting history:

This daily newspaper is a survivor and consolidation of The Corning Democrat, established in 1854 by Rev. Ira F. Brown, originally known as The Southern Tier Farmer, and The Corning Journal, established in 1847 by Thomas Messenger as The Corning Sun. The Democrat was purchased by Anthony L. Underhill and Edwin S. Underhill, in 1899, from Frank D. Brown; and The Journal, which had been run by George W. Pratt and Harry

[Faint, illegible text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page. The text is too light to transcribe accurately.]

H. Pratt for many years, was purchased by Edwin S. Underhill in 1920. Mr. Underhill named the paper The Evening Leader in 1903. When purchased The Democrat was a four page paper with less than 200 circulation. Today it is a minimum 12 page paper, with 10,000 circulation. The paper is independent in politics, owns its plant, which is very modern, and employs over 50 men and women. John F. Rolfe, now publisher of The Hartford Times, was managing editor and business manager of The Democrat and Leader for over a quarter of a century.

It was a Steuben man who first devised the jinrikisha, or rickshaw, The Encyclopedia Britannica to the contrary notwithstanding. The Britannica says this queer little two-wheeled vehicle was first made by a Japanese in 1870. As a matter of fact it was devised by Jonathan Goble, a native of Keuka, this county, before the days of the Civil War. Goble first served in the American Navy, then became a missionary who chose Japan as the field of his labors. He married a native wife who soon developed into a cripple. Seeking to devise some method of conveying her from place to place, Goble hit upon the cart. The Jap of 1870 simply adopted the missionary's model.

Steuben County has a remarkable Boy Scout organization. Originated by A. J. Deer, who for 6 months carried the financial burden alone, the organization now has 48 troops, with a total of 1,419 scouts, while the budget for 1935 is $12,000. The names of Dr. W. E. Gorton of Corning and M. F. Celette and J. H. Stevens of Hornell (all three gentlemen being now deceased) must always be associated with the rise and development of Scouting in this county. Many of the biggest men of the county give their time and money to this cause. Amory Houghton, President of the Corning Glass Works, is in charge of Region 2, Boy Scouts of America, comprising the states of New York and New Jersey. The elected officers of the Steuben Council for 1935 are: President, W. H. Curtiss; Vice-Presidents, E. J. Guttinger, C. C. Bateman, C. W. Prindle, F. W. Parkhurst; National Representative, F. C. Cameron; Comptroller, K. E. Plants; Treasurer, J. L. Thomas; Commissioner, David E. Gray; Secretary, P. L. Dunn. Up to the present time, the Silver Beaver (highest award in Scouting) has been given to Dr. W. E. Gorton, David E. Gray, Rev. H. L. Somers. There have been but four presidents: Deer, Gorton, Stevens, Curtiss. The total area of this council exceeds 2,000 square miles, comprising Steuben

County and eight adjacent townships in New York and Pennsylvania.

Save only the basic industry of agriculture, and the railroads, the county's greatest business institution is undoubtedly the Corning Glass Works. Its existence has been a boon to Corning; for during all of the depression it has continued to operate, having in excess of 2,000 persons on its pay roll. Its record is interesting; its accomplishments in the fields of industry and science have contributed much to Steuben's place in history.

The Brooklyn Flint Glass Company, which was the forerunner of the Corning Glass Works, moved its plant from Brooklyn to Corning in 1868. One of the owners, and the moving spirit in this enterprise, was Amory Houghton, Sr., and with him was associated his son, Amory Houghton, Jr. Upon arrival in Corning, the Brooklyn Flint Glass Company was established as the Corning Flint Glass Company. It built two furnaces and employed between 100 and 150 men.

This company was reorganized as the Corning Glass Works in 1875, with Mr. Amory Houghton, Jr., as President. Associated with him as Vice-President was his brother, Charles F. Houghton. The products of this concern were lead tubing and thermometer tubing; also lantern globes, lamp chimneys and lenses for railway and marine signal ware. A substantial part of the business was of best metal, such as table ware, water jugs, goblets, finger bowls and castor bottles.

The development of copper ruby flashed lenses and improvements in the design of railroad lenses during this period placed the company in a commanding position in the field of railroad signal ware.

Glass bulbs to enclose the filament of the new Edison electric lamp, developed by Thomas A. Edison, were first made in the Corning Glass Works about the year 1880.

The Company established a research laboratory in 1908, for the purpose of making a systematic study of the chemical and physical characteristics of glass. As a result of the work of this laboratory, many interesting and important types of glass hitherto not in commercial use were developed, notably Heat Resisting glasses sold under the "Pyrex" trade mark and used in the manufacture of baking ware, Heat Resisting lantern globes, chemical laboratory glass ware, and other articles.

Upon the death of his father, Mr. Amory Houghton, Jr., Mr.

Alanson B. Houghton became President. The growth of the company was rapid, both in this country and abroad, with important developments in the methods of manufacture, notably in glass working machinery, and in the introduction of new types of glass.

When Mr. Alanson B. Houghton was elected to Congress, his brother, Mr. Arthur A. Houghton, became President. In 1920, Mr. Alexander D. Falck was elected President. In 1928 he was followed in that office by Dr. Eugene C. Sullivan, who in turn was succeeded by Mr. Amory Houghton in 1930.

The business of the company may be described as the manufacture of technical glass ware, in which field it has grown in importance and volume, until it has become the leading exponent of products of a technical nature in the arts and sciences of the country.

One of the unusual developments of recent years has been the manufacture of a 200-inch telescopic reflector, the use of which, it is expected, will add important information to our present knowledge of the heavenly bodies. This huge disc is to be shipped to California for installation in the observatory on Mount Palomar, near San Diego. It will constitute a part of the world's largest telescope. . .

Before proceeding with the records of Who's Who in Steuben in 1935, let us scan the achievements of some men whose efforts helped establish for Steuben her present position among the counties of the State.

Reference has already been made to Colonel Charles Williamson, the first manager of the Pulteney Estate, the founder of Bath, and one of the big men of his day. He was followed, as the county's number 1 business man, by General George B. McClure, who initiated commercial navigation on Lake Keuka by placing the schooner "Sally" on the lake and building a warehouse at Hammondsport. During the War of 1812 he became a general of militia and saw service on the Niagara frontier.

One of the county's noted men of his day was Guy H. McMaster, the author of the first history of the county (1853), Steuben's first surrogate, and the creator of the nationally known poem, "Carmen Bellicosum."

Dr. Marcus Whitman, the savior of Oregon, was born at Rushville, Ontario County; but he married Narcissa Prentiss, of Prattsburg, and practiced medicine at Wheeler for several years before going to Oregon in 1836. . . His historic journey from beyond the Rockies to Washington, to save the Oregon country to the Union, is to be found described in all the histories. He was accompanied to the Pacific slope by Rev. H. H. Spalding, a native of Wheeler, who became a missionary to the Nez Percés and converted a thousand Indians.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. In the second section, the author details the various methods used for data collection and analysis, including the use of statistical software and manual calculations. The third part of the document focuses on the results of the study, highlighting the significant differences observed between the two groups. The final section concludes with a summary of the findings and offers suggestions for further research in this area.

Francis McDowell, a Steuben County man, was one of the seven founders of the National Grange and served as its treasurer from 1873 to 1893.

William Woods Averell, born in the Town of Cameron and educated at West Point, commanded the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac, had the distinction of being the only man to bluff Robert E. Lee, became a Major General of Volunteers, later was appointed Consul-General to Canada, invented the asphalt pavement, and spent his last years in Bath where he is buried.

Alanson B. Houghton was Ambassador to Germany, then to the Court of St. James. His biography is No. 1 in this book.

Steuben has furnished several high state officials. The following list, with dates of election or appointment, may not be complete, but it is at least suggestive:

Lieutenant Governor, Robert Campbell of Bath, 1858.

Adjutant General, William Irvine, Corning, 1865.

State Comptroller, Ira Davenport of Bath, 1881.

State Comptroller, Frank Campbell of Bath, 1891.

Attorney General, James A. Parsons of Hornell, 1914.

State Superintendent of Prisons, Austin Lathrop, Corning, 1887.

State Superintendent of Banking, Daniel C. Howell, Bath, 1870.

State Superintendent of Insurance, Jesse S. Phillips, Hornell, 1915.

What man has done man can do. Some of those who are listed in the pages that follow, may attain to the eminence of those gone before, and thereby add building stones to The Monument, which commemorates the Master Builder of the American Army, our own County of Steuben.

Now turn the page.

Who's Who in Steuben in 1935

1. ALANSON BIGELOW HOUGHTON, born Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 10, 1863, the son of Amory, Jr., and Ellen Ann (Bigelow) Houghton. Educated at Harvard University, from which he had degree of B.A. in 1886; LL.D. in 1927. Did post-graduate work at Gottingen, Berlin and Paris. He married Adelaide Wellington of Corning, N.Y., June 25, 1890. In 1889 he began the manufacture of glass in Corning. He was 2d vice-president of the Corning Glass Works 1903-10, president 1910-18, and has since been chairman of the board. He is a director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; ex-president Corning Board of Education; twice served as Republican presidential elector, and from 1919 to 1923 served the 37th District in Congress, resigning to become American Ambassador to Germany. He resigned in February, 1925, and the following April was appointed Ambassador to the Court of St. James, serving until 1928. The same year he was Republican candidate for U.S. Senator from New York. He is a member of the following clubs: Harvard, Metropolitan, University (New York City); Metropolitan, Chevy Chase, Burning Tree, University (Washington). He maintains homes at Corning, N.Y., and 3003 Mass. Ave., Washington, D.C.

2. WILLIAM WALKER CLARK, born Elgin, Ill., Feb. 14, 1858, the son of DeMarcus and Mary E. (Walker) Clark. 26. CHARLES JOSIAH WILDER, born Dec. 19, 1884, in Town of Cameron, son of George and Cynthia (Jackson) Wilder. Educated in Cameron schools. After leaving school he spent two years in newspaper work, then—Feb. 26, 1907—entered the service of the Erie R.R. as telegraph operator. This calling he has followed to date, at different times being station agent at Cameron and train dispatcher at Hornell. He is active in the affairs of Cameron Village. He has been a member of the school board for a number of years and at present is chairman of the board. He has twice served as Master of Cameron Mills Lodge No. 547, F.&A.M. He is a trustee of the M.E. Church of Cameron. He has played cornet in the local band and acted as drum major. In 1915 he qualified for an appointment in the U.S. Railway Mail Service, but declined the assignment. During the World War he was chairman of the local Red Cross. For a number of years he was town historian. Besides his village property, he owns the Wilder farm on South Hill, first occupied by his grandfather, Josiah Wilder. In 1909 he married Miss Jennie Louise Ingalls, of Canisteo. Children: Evelyn I., born Feb. 11, 1912, a graduate of Addison H.S. and Geneseo Normal, and now a teacher at Mount Morris; Charles Allen, born Feb. 2, 1923.

27. MARY (DAVIS) WEBSTER, a granddaughter of Levi Davis, who in 1824 bought the land on which the village of Greenwood now stands, and the next year opened the first store and tavern in the town. His tavern sign, dated 1830, is now owned by W. G. Kellogg and preserved by Sentinel Lodge of Greenwood; for this sign has on it the Masonic emblem. In 1830 it was a bold man indeed who dared flaunt his Masonry; for William Morgan of Batavia had disappeared four years previously and the Masons were universally charged with his murder. Mr. Davis' father, also named Levi, built the first Universalist church in the world, located at North Oxford, Mass. Levi Davis, Jr., died at Greenwood in 1863. His son, John Davis, was the father of Mary, the subject of this sketch. She was born in Greenwood, March 6, 1859. Educated at Alfred University and Clinton Liberal Institute, Clinton, N.Y. Married, Jan. 7, 1886, George M. Webster, who was connected with the firm of Thompson, Parkhurst & Co., of Elmira. He died April 1, 1911. 28. EDWIN W. COUNTRYMAN, son of William and Amanda (Baker) Countryman, born Jasper, N.Y., June 19, 1872. Educated in Jasper schools and Addison High School. He married Anna Belle Beach, of Seneca Falls, N.Y. Two children: Pauline and Beulah. He took up photography when such a profession called for a long apprenticeship. From 1902 to 1911, he was with the Lackawanna Steel Co. as official photographer. In 1903 he succeeded in taking a photograph of a Bessemer steel converter in action, up to that time the only one taken. This was reproduced in encyclopedias and numerous magazines. From 1911 to 1921, he was traveling photographic demonstrator in the West for the Eastman Kodak Co. Later he opened a trading post in the Allegany State Park near Salamanca, N.Y. In 1932 he returned to his old home in Jasper and there has opened a unique restaurant and gas station called "The Wigwam." This houses Mr. Countryman's large and rare collection of Indian curios, gathered during years of association with both eastern and western tribes. He has been adopted into the Six Nations, also into the secret order of the Little Medicine Society. He is a member of Robinson Lodge No. 895, of Jasper, F.&A.M.

39. ARLIE B. CONOVER, Captain of Co. K, 108th Infantry, N.G.N.Y., stationed at Hornell, was born Oct. 8, 1883, at Alfred, N.Y. Educated in Hornell High School and Hornell Business School. He has been associated with the National Guard for 32 years, having enlisted as a private June 20, 1902. He commanded the company organized to take the place of the regular unit sent to the Mexican Border in 1916. During the World War he commanded the depot unit at Hornell, at first with the rank of captain, but soon promoted to major. For a time after the war he was on reserve. At this time the affairs of Co. K were at a low ebb and there was danger of disbanding the company and closing the armory. At this juncture local business men, as well as high military authorities, induced Mr. Conover again to assume command of the company. This he did on May 5, 1926. Since that time the outfit has made remarkable progress in drill, general efficiency and interest of the personnel. Sober official reports of inspections made by Federal officers contain such notations as the following: "A superior company commanded by an exceptional officer who is an organizer of unusual ability." Also: "This company I again find to be superior in organization, with a most able company commander who gets more out of a unit than any National Guard officer I have met." Captain Conover has encouraged athletics, as well as marksmanship, in his company. He was responsible for bringing lacrosse to Hornell. The company won the regimental baseball trophy for 3 years straight: 1930, '31, '32. It won the regimental trophy for rifle marksmanship in 1928, '29, '33, '34. In both 1931 and 1932 it won the national trophy in target practice. All this since Mr. Conover took the company the last time. The armory, too, has been renovated and improved until it is one of the best armories in the state. Mr. Conover has been with the Huguet Silk Company for 22 years, and is now office manager, general purchasing agent and department superintendent, being assistant to the general manager. He married, April 25, 1905, Rhea Mae Hendershot, of Hornell. She was a daughter of W. D. and Catherine (Langs) Hendershot. They have a son, Wilfred W., now employed in the local armory. Mr. Conover's affiliations: member, Hornellsville Lodge No. 331, F.&A.M.; Past High Priest of the Royal Arch Chapter; member of the Council; Past Commander of DeMolay Commandery; member Damascus Shrine at Rochester; member of the Rotary

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. Furthermore, it highlights the role of the accounting department in providing timely and accurate information to management for decision-making purposes.

The second part of the document details the specific procedures for recording and reconciling accounts. It outlines the steps for posting journal entries to the general ledger and how to perform a bank reconciliation. The text also covers the process of preparing financial statements, including the balance sheet, income statement, and cash flow statement. It stresses the importance of adhering to generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) and providing clear explanations for any adjustments or discrepancies. The document concludes by stating that the accuracy and reliability of the financial reports are essential for the long-term success of the organization.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the English language. It discusses the various influences that have shaped the language over time, from Old English to Modern English. The author also touches upon the geographical spread of the language and the role of literature in its development.

CHAPTER I

The history of the English language is a complex and fascinating subject. It is a language that has evolved over centuries, shaped by a variety of factors including geographical location, cultural influences, and historical events. The roots of the English language can be traced back to the Germanic tribes who migrated to the British Isles in the fifth century AD. Over time, these languages merged and developed into Old English, which was the language of the Anglo-Saxons.

Old English was a highly inflected language, with a complex system of grammatical endings. It was written in a script called Old English script, which was a form of the Latin alphabet. The first written record of Old English is the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, which was compiled in the tenth century. This chronicle provides a valuable insight into the language and the culture of the time.

As the centuries passed, Old English gradually evolved into Middle English. This was a period of significant change, with many words being borrowed from French and Latin. The most famous work of Middle English is Geoffrey Chaucer's 'The Canterbury Tales', which was written in the late fourteenth century. Middle English was a more flexible and less inflected language than Old English, and it was written in a script called Middle English script.

She was educated at Cazenovia Seminary and at Wykham Hall, an Episcopal school in Toronto, Canada. On the 18th day of September, 1879, she was married to William W. Clark, who had recently opened an office in Wayland, N.Y., for the practice of law. (See No. 2.) She came to Wayland as a bride and has resided there ever since. She has always been active in community affairs, particularly in assisting the poor and unfortunate. She was for many years a member of the Steuben County Child Welfare Board, and is a member of the Steuben Nurses' Association. She has actively supported the Red Cross movement, and is Chairman of the Wayland Chapter of that organization, and Vice-Chairman of the Steuben County organization, which has its headquarters at Bath. Mrs. Clark has always been actively interested in community affairs, and is noted for her benevolences. For many years, and until her health was somewhat impaired, she was a director of the First National Bank, of Wayland, and is still one of its principal stockholders.

105. FRED DU BOIS CRANE was born Jan. 27, 1888, at Canisteo, and was educated in Canisteo Academy. He clerked in the local post office for a year, for a time was engaged in office work for the Erie R.R. Co., and later the Buffalo & Susquehanna R.R. Co., and finally the Superior Register Co. In 1915 he started the F. D. Crane Co., jobber of blank books. During the World War he served in the casualty camp at Camp Meigs, D.C. He was discharged March 1, 1919, and at once resumed the management of his own company. In August, 1932, he was appointed Receiver for the Up-To-Date Advertising Company.

He is noted as an expert in the field of sporting firearms and is reputed the largest dealer in guns in western New York and Pennsylvania. About 30 years ago Mr. Benjamin started dealing in guns, having studied them as a hobby all his life. Ten years ago he began to specialize in them. Gradually his fame as an authority has spread all over this section, and beyond. For the year 1933 his gross sales amounted to 620 firearms. This year it is even better. For the week of Oct. 7-13, 1934, he sold 70 guns. The total population of Haskinville hamlet probably does not exceed 40, yet sportsmen come to him from points as distant as Buffalo and even Toronto, Canada. For the last two years he has done no advertising, yet constantly his reputation and sales mount. He is, quite possibly, better known outside the county than in. His address is R.D. 3, Cohocton, N.Y.

130. FRED R. HALL, born July 1, 1873, in the Town of Howard, N.Y. He was educated in the public schools of Howard and in Canisteo Academy. He engaged in farming for 7 years, but in 1906 came to Canisteo and entered the milk business. But he had not yet found his proper groove in life. He discovered this when he selected for his life work the insurance business. He eventually became District Manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, and after 20 years was promoted to the Rochester office as Service Representative of the same company. He has always been exceedingly active in church and Sunday School work. In the spring of 1924 he was the originator of the movement to found what later became known as Methodist Park, near Canisteo. The stone building there was constructed in 1926. In its walls are stones from every town in the county, every county and state that bounds Steuben, from Canada, from Mexico, from the far West, far East, North and South. Mr. Hall was engaged for two years in collecting the cobblestones from which this very unique building was constructed. In a lead box sealed in the N.E. cornerstone were placed a copy of the deed to the property, copies of The Hornell Tribune-Times, The Canisteo Times, The Canisteo Chronicle, and a typewritten copy of a history of the proceedings. The box was placed in position by Mary Mills. Mr. Hall was the organizer and first President of the Baker Memorial Bible Class for Men, the organization that financed and built Methodist Park. He is a member of Morning Star Lodge No. 65, F.&A.M., of Canisteo. He was an official of the M.E. Church of Canisteo for 20 years. He married Nov. 28, 1894, Carrie E. Stewart, of the Town of Bath. Two children died in infancy. Mr. Hall's present residence is 61 Werner Park, Rochester, N.Y.

Telephone Co.; from 1919 to the present time, with the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. In 1930-31, he served as Division Line Inspector. He has held numerous offices, but is best known in the world of fraternalism. He was Chief of Police at Schenevus, N. Y., 1915-16. He served as Deputy Sheriff of Steuben County under Sheriff

W. B. Page. He is at present a Trustee of the Village of North Hornell. He is a Past Commander of the K.O.T.M., at Schenevus; a Past Grand I.O.O.F., at Schenevus. He was Master of Morning Star Lodge No. 65, F.&A.M., at Canisteo, 1928-29. Assistant Grand Lecturer of the Steuben Masonic District, from 1926 to the present, save in 1930-31. He is a member of the Royal Arch Chapter and the Council at Hornell. He holds membership in the Baptist Church. He is a member of the Republican County Committee. In 1908, he married Luella Milks, of Elk Creek, Otsego County, N.Y. One child: Ruth L., now Mrs. A. R. Swackhamer of Hornell. Mr. Chicker- ing's residence is at 359 Cleveland Ave., North Hornell, N.Y.

132. MARY MILLS, widely known and universally respected, was born in the Town of Canisteo, June 26, 1856. She resides with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Louise K. Mills, at 39 Russell St., Canisteo. Louise was born at Honeoye Falls, N. Y., May 31, 1866, her maiden name being Kellogg. She was married to Dale Mills of Canisteo on Aug. 29, 1889. He died Oct. 1, 1891. Louise was Supervisor of Music in Canisteo Academy for 34 years. She belongs to the Wimodaughsonian Club, is a Past Matron O.E.S., and was organist and choir leader in the M.E. Church for many years. She is a leader in missionary work. A year before her marriage she was graduated in Music at the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio. . . Mary Mills began teaching school at the age of 16, in the Carter District, of Canisteo Town. She taught in the Canisteo Village schools for more than 50 years, retiring in 1928. Two or more generations of men who now run the affairs of the village drew inspiration and gathered ideals from her teaching. They now regard her as an institution and never cease to boast that they were once her pupils. She has been a life-long member of the M.E. Church, a Sunday School teacher, Superintendent of the Sunday School, active on the official board. She has performed much service in Junior and Epworth League work. She is a Past Matron, O.E.S., and is a member of the White Shrine at Hornell. She has been Librarian of the Wimodaughsonian Library for 36 years. This library was organized in 1898, now has nearly 7000 volumes on its shelves, and is domiciled in its own building on West Main Street. Miss Mills was President of the W.C.T.U. for 5 years and yet retains her membership in the organization. She continues to take an active part in all local affairs looking toward the public good. Hers has been a life of service to humanity.

He was the son of Dr. Samuel Mitchell and Melissa Hubbard. Dr. Mitchell was from a family that has produced an unusual number of physicians. He was not only a well known doctor in his vicinity, but was once a member of the legislature. James W. Mitchell entered the drug business at Canisteo, April 1, 1881, this eventually becoming the Canisteo Drug Co., Inc. He followed this business until his death, Sept. 7, 1934—a period of 53½ years. He was extremely active in the affairs of the local M.E. Church, and was continuously on its official board. He was of sterling character, universally beloved, and was an open advocate of all movements looking toward the public welfare. He was a charter member of the Rotary Club. Children: (a) Harold Hubbard, a graduate of Canisteo Academy, 1907, 1 year at Lima Seminary; 6 years at Syracuse University, from which he had the degree of M.D., 1914; 1 year at Harvard, during which he went to Serbia to combat the typhus fever. He entered Public Health Work at Indianapolis, 1915, and during the World War was a 1st lieutenant of the Sanitary Squad. He is now Medical Director of school hygiene at Freeport, L.I. He married Mary Holiday, of Indianapolis, and has 2 children, Evalin and Nancy. (b) Evelyn F., a graduate of Canisteo Academy and Oswego Normal School. She married Edgar Van Sickle, of Port Jervis, N.Y. One daughter, Jane.

200. STACY LEONARD JACKSON, veteran Erie telegrapher, was born Aug. 20, 1872, in the Town of Hartsville, the son of Francis E. and Sarah (Ashbaugh) Jackson. Educated in the local district school, he commenced studying telegraphy in the fall of 1890, and on July 5, 1892, began his first assignment as an extra telegrapher for the Erie R.R. Co. at "The Rocks," a lonely tower near Waverly. He now has a wire in the Erie station at Hornell, with more than 42 years service to his credit. He is well known in the field of local historical and genealogical research. His "History of Cameron, N.Y.," which ran serially in the Canisteo Chronicle during the year 1923, is a monumental work. Six years were consumed in its preparation. It contains 135,000 words and covers the records of the first 300 families to settle in Cameron. For the most part the material was secured from original sources—family papers, Bibles, grave stones, town records, word-of-mouth narratives of ancient men. Mr. Jackson is a member of the Masonic bodies in Hornell. He married, Aug. 9, 1900, Anna Hallett, of Cameron. A son, Victor Cameron Jackson, died Jan. 3, 1931, at the age of 30. Mr. Jackson resides at 17 Erie Ave., Hornell.

201. GEORGE M. STUART, a farmer, tobacco planter and dairyman of Lindley, was born Aug. 29, 1898, in the Town of Rathbone, 8 months after his father's death. He was the son of George Stout and Mary Jane (Mantle) Stuart. George M. Stuart owns 500 acres, 100 being river bottom land in the Tioga Valley, a large prize-winning dairy, and two sets of farm buildings. He is a member of Painted Post Lodge No. 117, F.&A.M., of Corning, and of the I.O.O.F. He married, June 1, 1921, Helen A. Wood, of Lindley, N.Y. He accepted a position with the Ingersoll Rand Company, and spent 3 years in their New York City office, returning to Painted Post in 1923. In February, 1925, he was appointed Purchasing Agent for the same company, which position he still retains. He is a Ruling Elder in the Presbyterian Church, served 14 years as Sunday School Superintendent, 3 years as Church Treasurer, 2 years as Chairman of the Board of Trustees. He was made a Mason in 1915, and at the age of 27 was elected Master of Montour Lodge No. 168, at Painted Post. He was appointed District Deputy Grand Master of the Steuben Masonic District in June, 1934. He is distinguished for his energy, tact, affable manners, and sheer ability. On Sept. 29, 1914, he married Florence Wheeler. They have 3 children: Harold, Jr., Constance May, Douglas.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the history of the English language from the beginning of the 15th century to the present time. It is a very interesting and useful work, and one which every student of the English language should read. The author has done his work very well, and has given us a very clear and concise account of the history of the English language. The book is written in a very simple and easy-to-understand style, and is well illustrated with examples of the language. It is a very good book, and one which every student of the English language should read.

204. FRANCIS MELVIN ACKER, Assistant Manager of the Canisteo plant of the Grange League Federation Exchange, was born in Hartsville, Nov. 12, 1893. Education: Bryant School in Hornell; 2 years in high school; graduated from the Alfred Agriculture School, 1915. During the last year of his 3 year course there he did extension work in Allegany Co., under Prof. DuBois. He was Treasurer and Vice-President of his class. He was Treasurer and Vice-President of the Country Life Club. He presented the class graduating picture to the school. He had charge of the butter making during his senior year, for 3 months. He conducted "Seven-and-Thirty-Day" work in cow testing for the school. He played football 2 years and basket ball 3 years. Farming has been his regular occupation, and he yet owns and manages the Acker homestead of 233 acres in Hartsville, where his grandfather, his father and he were born. This place is now called Acker's Valley View Dairy Farm. Mr. Acker has been a member of the Grange since 1914, and served both as Overseer and Master, covering a period of 5 years, and has just been selected as Master again. He has also served as Treasurer, and during the past 2 years has been Degree Master. He was Director of the Allegany-Steuben Holstein-Friesian Club for 6 years. He was a member of the Republican County Committee for 14 years, Inspector of Election 6 years, Town Welfare Officer 6 years, Federal Census Enumerator in 1930. He is now Town Assessor, and Trustee of School Dist. No. 5, of Hartsville. For 12 years he has been Township Chairman of the Farm Bureau, and has conducted several corn experiments. During his 3 years as Secretary of the Holstein-Friesian Club, he managed 3 cattle sales that aggregated $60,000. He is a member of the Hartsville Community Church. He married, June 20, 1917, Edna M. King. Children: Hugh J., Eleanor K., Marilyn R., Lawrence E., Lois M. Address: R.D. 1, Hornell.

205. EDSON W. JENKINS, the oldest man in Hartsville and the only surviving veteran of the Civil War in that town, was born at Almond, N.Y., Aug. 30, 1845. At the age of 17 he enlisted in the First N.Y. Veteran Cavalry and was part of the command of General W. W. Averell. Much of his service was in the Shenandoah Valley, in Maryland and West Virginia. At the battle of Piedmont, Jenkins' troop charged dismounted, and but 11 were left for roll call. He participated in 31 battles, including Cedar Creek, where Sheridan retrieved a stricken field, and Monocacy, which saved Washington from Early's raid. Part of his service was against Moseby, the guerrilla. While on a scout of 10 he had a personal encounter with Moseby and would have killed him, only that his carbine missed fire. Mr. Jenkins was captured on this occasion, but managed to escape. He was never absent a day from his troop while in service. He was promoted to corporal, March 30, 1865, and was discharged, July, 20, 1865. Soldiering was in his blood, since his grandfather served with Washington at the age of 15. Since leaving the army farming has been Mr. Jenkins' life work. He once served as Town Clerk of Hartsville. He was a member of the Grand Army until the local post was disbanded. Since attaining his great age he sits by the fire with his pipe and lives again the stirring days of his military youth. His mind is still remarkably clear. On Aug. 28, 1873, he married Jane Beyea. Their children are: Edson Eugene; Alta (now Mrs. Curry Cline). Address: R.D. 1, Hornell, N.Y.

206. ERNEST E. LOOK was born Sept. 23, 1890, at Altmar, N.Y. He was educated at Houghton Seminary. He entered the ministry of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, his first pastorate being at Bath, N.Y. Other charges have been Sandy Creek, Fremont, West Sparta, South Dansville, Elmira, West Jasper. He remained at the latter location until July 1, 1934, at which time declining health induced him to give up, at least temporarily, the ministry. He had previously worked more or less at the printers' trade, so he now determined to establish a printing business. Accordingly, he opened the Jasper Job Press, Aug. 1, 1934. He selected a small village as the location of his plant in order to cut down the overhead sufficiently to permit him to furnish printing at a price to correspond with the flattened condition of the public's purse. It would appear that he is doing well at it. . . He married, Dec. 28, 1912, Jane M. Fox, of Wayland, N.Y. Her sister is a missionary in India. Mr. Look's address is Main St., Jasper, N.Y.

207. LLOYD WINTON LARSON was born Jan. 20, 1908, at Johnsonburg, Pa. Educated, Johnsonburg High School, 1925; Alfred University, B.S., 1929; Cornell University summer sessions, 1932-34. He came to Canisteo Academy as mathematics teacher and director of boys' athletics in 1929, remaining until 1934. In the latter year he went to Corning North Side High School as instructor in mathematics and assistant athletic coach. He is a member of Delta Sigma Phi college fraternity at Alfred and was President, 1928-29. He is a member of the Phi Psi Omega honorary fraternity at Alfred; the Phi Delta Kappa national educational fraternity at Cornell. While in Alfred he was President of his class during his junior and senior years. He was President of the Varsity "A" Club, 1928-29; Captain of the basketball team; member of the football squad. He is a member of Morning Star Lodge No. 65, F.&A.M., at Canisteo. In 1933-34, he was President of the Tri-County Mathematics Association. Address: 59 W. Pulteney St., Corning, N.Y.

208. FRANKLIN C. EMPEY, son of James Miller and Mary Theresa (Smith) Empey, was born August 9, 1892, at Sterling, Ontario, Canada. He was educated in the East High School of Rochester, N.Y., and the University of Michigan, taking the course in architecture and designing. After leaving college he went with the People's Five and Ten Cent Store as draftsman. In 1916 he was sent to Bath, N.Y., to open a store for this company. Later he went to Perry, N.Y., as manager of the Metropolitan Stores; but returned to Bath in 1919, as a partner in the firm Messerschmitt & Empey, wholesale candy manufacturers. He still retains his interest in this company. He is very active in fraternal circles, being a Past Master of Steuben Lodge No. 112, F.&A.M.; a Past High Priest of Bath Chapter No. 5, R.A.M.; member of Hornellsville Council No. 35; a member of DeMolay Commandery No. 22, of Hornell. He is Assistant Grand Lecturer of the Steuben Masonic District, and is Treasurer of the Bath Masonic Temple Association. He is Treasurer of Bath Lodge No. 1547, B.P.O.E. He is a member of the Christian Science Church and at present is Treasurer. On April 26, 1917, he married Carlana Louise, daughter of William and Catherine (Huber) Messerschmitt, of Bath. She is a Past Matron of the Order of the Eastern Star. Children: Mary Louise, died Sept. 9, 1933; Carlana Wilma; James William. Address: 31 Robie St., Bath, N.Y.

209. JOSEPH LAWRENCE BAILEY, present Under-Sheriff of Steuben County, was born Aug. 15, 1895, at Corning, N.Y., and was educated in Corning South Side High School. After leaving school he clerked for a time in Corning, then entered the employ of the Erie R.R. Company at Hornell. During the World War he was with Company D, 9th Machine Gun Battalion, 3d Division, and participated in 6 major engagements. Wounded, Oct. 14, 1918, at Madaline Farm, he spent 3 months in the hospital, then joined the Army of Occupation in Germany. He was promoted to sergeant in July, 1918, and was discharged Nov. 19, 1919. After leaving the military service he returned to railroad work and continued in this calling until 1923. Then, owing to the state of his health, he engaged in farming with his father, in the Town of Addison. His father, William J. Bailey, died in 1928, but Joseph remained on the farm another year, then sold out and accepted a position with the International Harvester Company. This work he followed until he was appointed Under-Sheriff, January 1, 1934. He is a Past Master of Addison Union Lodge No. 118, F.&A.M. and is active in the work of the Grange. He has held all offices in the Addison Grange, is a Past Master of the Pomona, and at one time was Deputy State Master. He married, Oct. 2, 1920, Nettie Thompson of Addison. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice, and that these documents should be stored in a secure and accessible location. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data and to identify any discrepancies or errors. Furthermore, it highlights the role of technology in streamlining the accounting process, such as using accounting software to automate calculations and generate reports. The document concludes by stating that a robust record-keeping system is essential for the long-term success and transparency of any business or organization.

The second part of the document provides a detailed overview of the accounting cycle, which consists of eight steps: 1. Analyzing transactions, 2. Journalizing, 3. Posting to the ledger, 4. Preparing a trial balance, 5. Adjusting entries, 6. Preparing financial statements, 7. Closing entries, and 8. Reversing entries. Each step is explained in detail, including the specific journal entries and ledger accounts involved. The document also discusses the importance of adjusting entries to ensure that the financial statements accurately reflect the economic reality of the business. Finally, it provides a summary of the key concepts and principles of accounting, along with some practical tips for implementing an effective accounting system.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. Furthermore, it highlights the role of the accounting department in providing timely and accurate information to management for decision-making purposes. The document concludes by stating that adherence to these principles is essential for the long-term success of the organization.

The second part of the document details the specific procedures for handling cash payments and receipts. It outlines the steps for issuing receipts, including the requirement for a signature and date. The text also describes the process of depositing cash into the company's bank account and the importance of reconciling the bank statements with the accounting records. Additionally, it discusses the handling of petty cash and the need for a separate fund to manage small, everyday expenses. The document provides a clear framework for ensuring that all cash transactions are properly recorded and accounted for. Finally, it reiterates the commitment to transparency and accountability in all financial operations.

285. ELMER J. STUART, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Corning, was born May 15, 1877, at South Howard, N.Y., the son of Samuel W. and Mary Ann (Carroll) Stuart. S.W. Stuart was a public school teacher for more than 40 years. Elmer J. Stuart was graduated from Haverling High School, Bath, in 1899; Hamilton College, 1903, A.B.; Auburn Theological Seminary, 1906. During this year he received the degree of M.A. from Hamilton College. While a student at this institution he was a member of the Emerson Literary Society. He was ordained on June 13, 1906, by the Presbytery of Utica. His first pastorate was at the Cochrane Memorial Presbyterian Church of Oneida Castle, which he served from 1906 to 1912. He was then at Prattsburg from 1912 to 1916; the First Church of Watervliet, N.Y., 1916 to 1919; at Corning from 1919 to date. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Alfred University in 1923. He has 3 times been Commissioner to the General Assembly. From 1919 to 1933 he was a Director of the Auburn Theological Seminary. He was Stated Clerk of the Steuben Presbytery from 1919 to 1933, when it was merged with Chemung Presbytery, and has been Stated Clerk of the Steuben-Elmira Presbytery from 1933 to date. He was a member of the Judicial Commission of the Synod of New York in 1929. He is now on the Visiting Committee of the Synod of New York for Elmira College. He is a member of Prattsburg Lodge No. 583, F.&A.M.; the Corning Consistory; the Rotary Club. He married, May 16, 1906, Myrtle Olive Hoyt, of Bath, a graduate of Haverling High School, the Teachers' Training Class, and a teacher for 5 years in the Bath schools. Children: Elmer Maurice, who had a year at Alfred University, graduated at the Renaud Training School at New York City, and is now a funeral director at Ilion, N.Y.; Mary Myrtle, a graduate of Elmira College, with postgraduate work at Albany State Teachers' College, and now teaching Latin and history in Woodhull Academy.

286. FREDERICK ROUNSVILLE PAYNE, Lieutenant-Commander, U.S. Navy, retired, was born Aug. 5, 1874, at Corning, N.Y., the son of Benjamin N. and Esther (Rounsville) Payne. His grandfather, B.W. Payne, founded the Payne Engine Company of Corning, building the first engine that Edison used in his work in New York. This company took the gold medal for the best engine at the Centennial in Philadelphia in 1876. The Marrow plant at Elmira is now the successor of this concern. . . Frederick R. Payne was educated in a German Kindergarten School, Corning grade schools, Elmira city schools, Miss Johnson's Private School, the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis—being appointed to this institution by Congressman Thomas S. Flood in 1888. He was graduated in 1892 as a passed midshipman and served 2 years in that rank, being commissioned ensign in 1894. At the Battle of Santiago he was on the auxiliary cruiser, "St. Louis." He was ordered to the Asiatic station in time to participate in the fall of Manila. During the Philippine Insurrection he commanded the gunboat, "Pampanga," and rendered heroic service in the waters of Samar and Leyte. His career was colorful and romantic and some of his exploits have been noted in literature. The author believes that Payne was the young naval lieutenant referred to on page 93 of Colonel F. M. Wise's book, A Marine Tells It To You. Under a thin disguise Payne also appears in William M. Stuart's book, Hand to Back—in the chapter captioned "Red Dawn in Leyte." He was promoted at one jump from ensign to senior lieutenant, attaining the rank of lieutenant commander in 1905. He married, at Sherry's, New York City, Nov. 3, 1906, Ethel Louise Gorton (see No. 287), and two days later sailed for a year's honeymoon in Europe. He was retired in 1911 for physical disability received in the line of duty, but was recalled for active duty during the World War. He was executive officer at the U.S. Naval Home in Philadelphia, in charge of recruiting for the 4th Naval District. He enlisted the first woman ever taken into the naval force. His duties here were numerous and important and for his work he received an official citation. Since his final retirement he has lived in California and in Corning, where he at present resides at 77 E. First St. His children: Ethel Gorton Payne, now the wife of Lieutenant J. W. Brown, U.S.A. Air Corps, stationed at Panama; Frederick R. Payne, Jr., now a student at the University of Arizona.

287. ETHEL LOUISE (GORTON) PAYNE, born in Corning January 23, 1879, is a descendant of a family much older than Corning itself. Her ancestor, Peleg Gorton, was a large landowner in the country round about where Corning now stands at least as early as 1791. He had served in the Revolution, and then, after removing to the Painted Post country, he became one of the most energetic and useful citizens of that wild region. His son Rufus and grandson Samuel also were among the most prominent and industrious residents of the locality, while his great-grandson, Alonzo H. Gorton, became the first superintendent of the Fall Brook Railway. Alonzo's son, Dr. William E. Gorton, of the fifth generation of the family to reside in Corning, became the best known of all. He was Corning's first mayor, founder and president of the Corning Iron Works, the Corning Brake Shoe Co., the Gorton Chocolate Co., and other concerns. He was extremely active in local affairs; was chairman of the Board of Education for many years, the first president of the Boy Scouts of the Steuben Area, gave much of the land where Camp Gorton now stands, and was made a Beaver Scout by President Hoover. He married Clara Belle Stevens of Buffalo and LeRoy, N.Y., the daughter of Peabody S. Stevens, a prominent merchant of Buffalo of pre-Civil War days. Dr. W. E. and Mrs. Gorton had five children: (a) Ethel, the subject of this sketch. (b) Belle A., who married Leslie Gage of Australia and England. (c) Alonzo H., who died in infancy. (d) William Edward, Jr., married Lillian Waldron and is now president of the Gorton Chocolate Company. (e) Gretchen, married Lieutenant Dorsey O. Thomas, U.S. Navy. . . Ethel L. (Gorton) Payne, after leaving school, spent several years studying in Europe and became proficient in the language and literature of the Germans, French and Italians. She has always taken an interest in public affairs. She organized the Women's Section for Preparedness of the Navy League in Pennsylvania and was elected a director and life member. Her marriage to Lieutenant-Commander Payne was noted in the preceding biography.

288. MALCOLM B. MOSHIER, Town Clerk of Erwin, was born Feb. 17, 1898, at Tioga, Pa. He was graduated from the Tioga High School in 1915. He was then with the Erie Railroad Co. at Tioga 4 years, 11 years in the Erie station at Painted Post as billing clerk, with the Ingersoll-Rand Co., as production clerk, 2 years. Next followed 2 years as T.E.R.A. Director for Steuben County, with headquarters in Bath, after which he was disbursing officer for 4 months. In June, 1934, he was appointed Public Welfare Officer and Town Clerk of Erwin. Previous

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. Furthermore, it highlights the role of the accounting department in providing timely and accurate information to management for decision-making purposes. The document concludes by stating that adherence to these principles is essential for the long-term success of the organization.

The second part of the document outlines the specific procedures for handling cash payments. It details the steps from the initial request to the final recording of the transaction. Key points include the requirement for proper authorization and the use of pre-numbered checks. The text also discusses the importance of depositing cash receipts promptly to avoid any loss or misappropriation. Additionally, it mentions the need for maintaining a clear and organized checkbook. The document ends with a reminder to always double-check the accuracy of the entries before finalizing them.

342. JERRY L. GARDINER was born Aug. 8, 1867, at Cameron, N.Y., the son of Sanford A. and Marietta (Hinds) Gardiner. This family descends from Lion Gardiner who was granted Gardiner's Island, at the eastern end of Long Island Sound, by the British king in 1639. Both the family and its island are famous in Colonial history. It was on Gardiner's Island that the pirate Captain Kidd buried some of his treasure. . . After leaving school, Jerry L. Gardiner taught for several years, engaged in farming, was employed in a general store at Painted Post, and from 1912 to 1923 was salesman, collector and machine expert for the International Harvester Company out of the Elmira branch, covering 18 counties in Southern N.Y. and Northern Penn. Since May 7, 1923, he has been in the employ of the Erie Railroad Co. as timekeeper. He has been a successful auctioneer, and for 30 years practiced law in justice court, continuing until the law which went into effect in September, 1933, prohibited any but lawyers from such practice. He served as deputy sheriff under Sheriffs Kellogg and Bartlett, and at present is a constable of the Town of Rathbone. He has been a member of the Democratic County Committee for 8 years. He was a charter member of the I.O.O.F. Lodge at Cameron. On June 20, 1886, he married Fannie J. Barker of Cameron. Children: Charles S., born Nov. 2, 1890; Luman B., born June 18, 1899. Both sons now reside in Canisteo. Mr. Gardiner's home is at Cameron Mills.

343. ROSS WOODBURY DENNIS was born Dec. 16, 1881, in the Town of Jasper, N.Y., the son of George and Lura A. (Woodbury) Dennis. Education: Canisteo Academy, St. John's Military School, Manlius, N.Y., a course in veterinary medicine at Cornell University. He began farming on the Woodbury place in Jasper, and gradually developed a herd numbering from 75 to 100 head. He owned the first cow in Western New York that produced 31 pounds of butter and 700 pounds of milk in 7 days. His specialty was pure-bred Holsteins; he sold units from his herd to many parts of the United States and shipped 22 head to Santiago, Cuba. He bought the first Fordson tractor sold in Western New York in Sept., 1918, and has gone in for power farming. He states that he was the first dairyman in Steuben to have a herd tested for T.B. by the Federal Government (1919), and the first to have a Federal blood test for bovine abortion (Dec., 1934). From 1921 to 1929, he was employed by the State Department of Farms & Markets as an appraiser of T.B. cattle. In 1920 he purchased the Willow Bend Farm, his present residence, a mile east of Canisteo. He now owns and operates 750 acres in Jasper and Canisteo. He is a charter member and Past Master of Robinson Lodge No. 895, F.&A.M., of Jasper, and is President of the Board of Trustees of the Canisteo Presbyterian Church. On Nov. 16, 1905, he married Fannie Louise, daughter of Daniel H. and Electa (Fuller) Stephens, of Canisteo. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. Furthermore, it highlights the role of the accounting department in providing timely and accurate information to management for decision-making purposes.

In addition, the document outlines the procedures for handling discrepancies and errors. It states that any identified errors should be investigated immediately and corrected as soon as possible. The text also discusses the importance of maintaining proper documentation for all financial activities, including bank statements and tax returns. Moreover, it mentions the need for clear communication and collaboration between different departments to ensure the smooth flow of financial information.

The document also addresses the issue of budgeting and financial forecasting. It explains that a well-defined budget is essential for controlling costs and achieving organizational goals. The text provides guidelines for developing a realistic budget and for monitoring actual performance against the budgeted figures. Additionally, it discusses the importance of regular financial reviews and reports to keep management informed of the company's financial health.

In conclusion, the document stresses the significance of sound financial management practices for the long-term success of the organization. It encourages all employees to adhere to the established policies and procedures and to maintain a high level of transparency and accountability in all financial dealings.

The first section of the report discusses the general situation of the country and the progress of the war. It mentions the military operations and the political events that have taken place since the beginning of the conflict. The author provides a detailed account of the various battles and the movements of the armies, as well as the diplomatic relations between the warring parties. The text is written in a formal and objective style, typical of official reports of that era.

The second section of the report focuses on the economic and social conditions of the country during the war. It describes the impact of the conflict on the population, the state of the economy, and the measures taken by the government to address these challenges. The author highlights the difficulties faced by the civilian population, such as food shortages and the displacement of people, and discusses the government's efforts to provide relief and maintain social order. This section provides a comprehensive overview of the human and economic toll of the war.

The third and final section of the report offers a summary of the findings and conclusions drawn from the data presented. It reiterates the key points of the report and provides a final assessment of the overall situation. The author emphasizes the importance of continued vigilance and the need for further action to address the remaining issues. The report concludes with a statement of the author's hope for a peaceful resolution of the conflict and a return to normalcy for the country.

lic library and a director for years. He was one of the best authorities on genealogical research in Western New York. A graduate of 3 colleges, he was a student of no mean calibre. He died at the age of 79. His son, Chauncey P., spent 25 years in the employ of the Erie R.R., for the last 15 years of this time being a shop foreman. He wrote, and published in the Railway Mechanical Engineer, several technical articles on railroad work. After leaving the employ of the Erie, Mr. Hubbard organized a trucking business in connection with state road building. He is Chairman of the Steuben and Allegany counties' branch of the New York State Motor Truck Association. He is also Treasurer of the Steuben-Allegany Motor Truck Association. Affiliations: A ruling Elder of the First Presbyterian Church for a number of years; Sunday School Superintendent, 5 years; Past Master of Evening Star Lodge No. 44, F.&A.M.; member of the Royal Arch Chapter, the Council, the Commandery, the Masonic Hall Association, the Past Masters' Association of Steuben. He married, May 20, 1903, Clara Lake of Hornell. Children: Albert William; Norman Lake; Chauncey George; Anna Rose. . . Mr. Hubbard's mother, too, came from one of Steuben's old families. She was the daughter of Henry C. and Amanda (Keeler) Prentice. Henry's father was a pioneer of Jasper. Amanda Keeler is worthy of special notice. Married at the age of 15 to Henry C. Prentice, she accompanied him from Canisteo to Hutchinson, Kansas, when he developed tuberculosis and was with him when he died. She then went to Chicago and entered settlement work during the depression of the 1890's. In this work she proved extremely successful. She taught a Sunday School of 500 children; from moneyed men she raised large sums for the relief of the unemployed; she became widely known for her activities, but she died at the early age of 56, having virtually worked herself to death. It would take more than this brief sketch to do her record justice. . . Her grandson, Chauncey P. Hubbard, the subject of this biography, resides at 11 East Washington St., Hornell.

379. MAX I. LANDMAN, President of the L. & C. Coat, Suit and Dress Company of Hornell, was born June 15, 1891, at Norwich, Connecticut. He was educated in the Oneida, N.Y., High School, and at the age of 13 entered the retail mercantile business. He came to Hornell in 1916. It is said that he was

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the English language. The author discusses the various factors which have influenced the development of the language, such as the contact with other languages, the influence of the Norman Conquest, and the changes in pronunciation and grammar over time. He also touches upon the role of literature and the standardization of the language.

The second part of the book is a detailed study of the Old English period, from the Anglo-Saxon invasions to the Norman Conquest. The author examines the Old English language in its various dialects, its grammar, and its literature. He discusses the influence of Old Norse and Old French on Old English, and the role of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle and other historical documents in the study of the language.

The third part of the book is a study of the Middle English period, from the Norman Conquest to the late fifteenth century. The author discusses the influence of French and Latin on Middle English, the development of the language in its various dialects, and the role of literature in the standardization of the language. He also touches upon the influence of the printing press on the language.

The fourth part of the book is a study of the Modern English period, from the late fifteenth century to the present. The author discusses the influence of Latin and French on Modern English, the development of the language in its various dialects, and the role of literature in the standardization of the language. He also touches upon the influence of the printing press on the language.

The book is written in a clear and concise style, and is suitable for students of the history of the English language. It is a valuable reference work for anyone interested in the history of the English language.

the first local merchant to put a modern front in his store. He constructed a new office building—now called by his name—at the corner of Main and Canisteo Streets, and is one of the largest property owners in the city. Affiliations: Hornellsville Lodge No. 331, F.&A.M.; B.P.O.E.; Chamber of Commerce. He married, Feb. 17, 1910, Margaret S. Stowell, of Canastota, N.Y. 380. CHARLES CADOGAN was born Sept. 10, 1838, at Canisteo, N.Y., the son of Abram and Frances Jane (Whitwood) Cadogan. His parents removed to Hornellsville when he was 10 years of age, and he first clerked in the store of Ely and Brown, located at the corner of Main and Broad Streets. Shortly after the Erie R.R. was put through he entered its employ, was advanced to yardmaster, and eventually retired in 1868. The same year he entered the grocery business, purchasing the business formerly owned by Ely and Brown, the place of his boyhood apprenticeship. He took in as a partner J. W. Nicholson. After 20 years in this business, Mr. Cadogan was chosen President of the Citizens' National Bank. He served in this capacity for 28 years, or from 1887 to 1915; continuing after that as a director until 1929. Now, at the age of 96, his mind is still clear. Physically, too, he is in remarkably good health, considering his great age, save for failing eyesight and some defects in hearing. . . . On Aug. 4, 1859, he married Corinne Sweetland, who was born at Hemlock, N.Y., and was educated in Miss Dwight's School For Girls, and Alfred University. She was of New England stock, tracing her descent from 7 or more Mayflower ancestors. Her parents were David and Amanda (Francis) Sweetland. Mr. Sweetland came to Hornellsville in 1852. On Aug. 4, 1934, Mr. and Mrs. Cadogan celebrated their 75th wedding anniversary, and on the 12th of the following month Mrs. Cadogan died. . . . Mr. Cadogan's affiliations: The old Hornellsville Board of Trade; Evening Star Lodge No. 44, F.&A.M.; Universalist Church. Children: Mary F., now Mrs. Francis Williams of Hornell; Anna, now Mrs. C. W. Etz of Hornell; Bertha, at home; Gertrude Sweetland, now Mrs. J. H. Wynne, of New York City; Lucy, at home. Residence: 103 Genesee St., Hornell.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the United States. The author discusses the various factors that have influenced the development of the country, including geography, climate, and the influence of different ethnic groups. He also touches upon the political and social changes that have shaped the nation over time.

In the second part, the author provides a detailed account of the early years of the United States, from the time of the first settlers to the end of the Revolutionary War. He describes the challenges faced by the young nation and the role of key figures in its development. The third part of the book focuses on the period of the Civil War and Reconstruction, highlighting the struggles and achievements of this era.

The final part of the book discusses the modern history of the United States, from the end of World War II to the present day. The author examines the country's role in the world, its economic growth, and the social and political issues that have defined the late 20th and early 21st centuries.

He was graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover, 1888, and from Yale University, with the degree of A.B., in 1892. There are three things which are necessary for the attainment of the highest good, namely, wisdom, wealth, and health. The first of these is the most important, for without it the other two are of no use.

It is not enough to have wisdom, if one is poor and sick. It is not enough to have wealth, if one is ignorant and ill. It is not enough to have health, if one is ignorant and poor. Therefore,
the highest good is the combination of all three.
But how can we attain this? The answer is, by the pursuit of wisdom, wealth, and health.
Wisdom is attained by the study of philosophy,
wealth by the pursuit of a liberal profession,
and health by the practice of a moderate life.
The study of philosophy is necessary for the attainment of wisdom, for it teaches us the principles of truth and the nature of the soul.
The pursuit of a liberal profession is necessary for the attainment of wealth, for it teaches us
the art of managing our affairs and the art of dealing with men. The practice of a moderate life is necessary for the attainment of health, for it teaches us the art of living in a way which is consistent with the laws of nature.

It is not enough to have wisdom, if one is poor and sick. It is not enough to have wealth, if one is ignorant and ill. It is not enough to have health, if one is ignorant and poor. Therefore,
the highest good is the combination of all three.
But how can we attain this? The answer is, by the pursuit of wisdom, wealth, and health.
Wisdom is attained by the study of philosophy,

attainment of wisdom, for it teaches us the principles of truth and the nature of the soul.
The pursuit of a liberal profession is necessary for the attainment of wealth, for it teaches us
the art of managing our affairs and the art of dealing with men. The practice of a moderate life is necessary for the attainment of health, for it teaches us the art of living in a way
which is consistent with the laws of nature.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the English language. The author discusses the various influences that have shaped the language over time, including the contributions of Old English, Middle English, and Modern English. He also touches upon the role of dialects and the process of language change.

The second part of the book is a detailed study of the history of the English language from the beginning of the 15th century to the present. The author examines the changes in grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation that have taken place over the centuries. He also discusses the influence of other languages, particularly French and Latin, on the English language.

The third part of the book is a study of the English language in the 19th and 20th centuries. The author discusses the changes in the language that have taken place as a result of the Industrial Revolution and the rise of the English language as a world language. He also discusses the influence of American English and the role of the English language in the modern world.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the English language. The author discusses the various influences that have shaped the language over time, including the contributions of Old English, Middle English, and Modern English. He also touches upon the role of dialects and the process of language change.

In the second part, the author provides a detailed account of the historical development of the English language. He traces the roots of the language back to its Germanic origins and examines the impact of Latin and French borrowings. The text covers the evolution of grammar, vocabulary, and pronunciation, highlighting key historical events and literary works that have influenced the language.

The final part of the book focuses on the modern English language and its current state. The author discusses the influence of technology, globalization, and social media on the way we communicate. He also explores the ongoing debate about the future of the English language and the role of language in society. The book concludes with a summary of the main points discussed throughout the text.

429. WILLIAM CHASE SMITH was born on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 27, 1891, at Cameron, N.Y., the son of Frank H. and Estella B. (Jackson) Smith. He was graduated from Canisteo Academy in 1910, and during the year 1911-12 taught the village school at Cameron Mills. He then tried the Federal Civil Service examination for Supervisor of Schools in the Philippines, passed, and received an appointment, but declined on account of family objections. In 1913 he was graduated from Renouard's School of Embalming in New York City, and was licensed by the State Board of Health. While in high school he had been active in athletics, making both the baseball and football teams for 3 years, pitching for the former and playing halfback for the latter. During the summers of 1915 and 1916 he played semi-pro baseball with Addison, N.Y., and Galeton, Pa., earning considerable fame as a pitcher. From 1914 to 1918 he was in the U.S. Railway Mail Service. From Nov. 1, 1921, to date he has been a member of the force of the Canisteo Post Office, serving at different times as carrier, clerk, and acting assistant postmaster. He married, Oct. 31, 1916, Myrtle V., daughter of Henry S. and Tirzah H. (Wilkins) Smith, of Milford, Delaware, but formerly of New York State. Miss Smith's paternal grandfather, Fonda Smith, was a descendant of Douw Fonda, the famous Revolutionary patriot after whom Fonda, N.Y. was named. Myrtle V. Smith was graduated from Addison, N.Y., High School and the Corning, N.Y., Teachers' Training Class, and prior to her marriage (which did not necessitate the changing of her name) she taught for 10 years. She is a member of the Canisteo M.E. Church, and is Secretary-Treasurer of the Wimodaughian Library Association. Appointed to Hornell by Bishop John Francis O'Hern, Aug. 1, 1931. The new parish of St. Ignatius Loyola was erected at this time, to care for the spiritual needs of Catholic people living in the southern part of the city. For the first year after coming to Hornell, Father Cameron was also pastor of the Canisteo Church. Plans were immediately inaugurated for building a church and school in the new parish, but owing to the local bank failures these plans were suspended. A temporary church was opened Dec. 6, 1931, in the old McGreevy Department Store on Canisteo Street. In December, 3 years later, under the direction of Archbishop Mooney, a new church building was started on the corner of Grand and Pine Streets. It is expected this will be dedicated shortly after Easter, 1935. The estimated cost of the structure is $35,000. Plans are also made for a school building in connection with the church. Reverend Cameron's residence is 343 Canisteo Street. . . Within the limits of his parish is located St. James' Mercy Hospital, a city institution. Rev. James M. Early bought an old residence on Canisteo Street and gave it to the city for the purpose of establishing a hospital. This was incorporated in January, 1890. Its present valuation is in excess of $200,000. There are 110 beds, and the staff comprises practically every physician in the city. Dr. Taylor is the present Chief of Staff. The affairs of the hospital are conducted by a Board of Managers consisting of 9 members. The institution is located at 411 Canisteo Street.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general survey of the history of the United States from the discovery of the continent to the present time. It is divided into three main periods: the colonial period, the revolutionary period, and the federal period. The colonial period is characterized by the struggle for independence from Great Britain, and the revolutionary period by the establishment of a new government. The federal period is marked by the growth of the nation and the development of a strong central government. The book is written in a clear and concise style, and is suitable for both students and general readers. It is a valuable work for anyone interested in the history of the United States.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice. The text also mentions the need for regular audits to ensure the integrity of the financial data. Furthermore, it highlights the role of the accounting department in providing timely and accurate information to management for decision-making purposes. The document concludes by stating that adherence to these principles is essential for the long-term success and stability of the organization.

The second part of the document outlines the specific procedures for handling cash payments and receipts. It details the steps involved in issuing receipts, including the requirement for a signature and date. The text also describes the process of depositing cash into the company's bank account and the importance of reconciling the bank statements with the internal records. Additionally, it discusses the handling of petty cash and the need for a separate record to track these small transactions. The document ends with a reminder to always double-check the accuracy of all financial entries before finalizing them.

The first part of the book is devoted to a general introduction to the subject of the history of the English language. It discusses the various influences that have shaped the language over time, including the contributions of Old English, Middle English, and Modern English. The author also touches upon the role of literature and the standardization of the language.

The second part of the book is a detailed study of the development of the English language from its roots in Old English to the modern forms we use today. It covers the phonetic, morphological, and syntactic changes that have occurred. The author provides a comprehensive overview of the language's evolution, including the influence of other languages like French and Latin. This section is particularly thorough, offering a deep understanding of the linguistic processes at work.

The final part of the book discusses the current state of the English language and its future. It explores how the language continues to evolve with modern technology and global communication. The author concludes with thoughts on the importance of understanding the history of the language to appreciate its richness and diversity.
